WHY SHOULD I PREPARE?

Everyone should have a plan.

Disasters come in many forms; explosions, hurricanes, tornadoes, and others. Being prepared can reduce fear, anxiety, and losses that accompany these disasters. Individuals, families, and communities should know what to do in the event of a fire and where to seek shelter during a tornado. Knowing what to expect and how to prepare makes any crisis more manageable.

Hurricane Stress

Train, Develop, and Inspire the World's Best Airmen

- Disasters such as a hurricanes can be sudden and overwhelming, even if you are prepared
- It's important to recognize that you have been exposed to a traumatic event and it is bound to affect you in some way
- It's common for people who have experienced traumatic situations to have strong emotional reactions
- There is no right or wrong way to feel or think: any reaction you have is valid; there is no standard pattern of reaction
- Be accepting of your own feelings and reactions as well as those of others
- Talking about the event can be very helpful
- Shock and denial are typical responses; they are normal protective responses
- Feelings may become intense and unpredictable; increased irritability, mood changes, some anxiety or nervousness

Wingmen, Leaders, Warriors!

Hurricane Stress

Train, Develop, and Inspire the World's Best Airmen

- There are several ways you can help restore emotional well being and a sense of control:
  - Recognize this is a challenging time but one you can manage. You have had other hardships so use the skills from past challenges
  - Allow yourself to mourn the losses you have experienced
  - Be patient with yourself; create routines and exercise
  - Take a news break! Watching replays of news footage can increase your stress
  - Engage in healthy behaviors: eat well, get plenty of rest, practice relaxation techniques, avoid alcohol and drugs
- When should I seek professional help?
  - Individuals with prolonged reactions that disrupt daily functioning should consult with a trained mental health professional
